Dear Senator Fasano and Representative Klarides:

Revenue is not the problem; spending is. Despite years of windfall income from the Lottery and casinos, and the highest per capita tax burden in the nation, CT is unable to produce a balanced budget without, again, picking the pockets of its constituents. Until, and unless, you control that problem, particularly with respect to state employee salaries and benefits, there will never be enough revenue to satisfy the glutinous drain on businesses and individuals. Despite his obvious other flaws, Rowland understood this. If Malloy does, and I don't believe he's stupid, he certainly isn't owning up to it.

Please believe that all who can are planning on exiting this spendthrift state making your problems even worse. It's a very obvious death spiral to all except the liberals who won't face reality. Can you say/spell Greece?
