Dear Senator Fasano and Representative Klarides:

I am a principal for an Architectural firm in Simsbury, Connecticut which provides design services to a number of fortune 100 companies in Connecticut which have both a national and international presence. Everyday we compete against other firms that could do work for these companies from across the country. What we don't need the Legislature to do is to craft a law which makes disadvantages the firms in Connecticut who compete to do work elsewhere in the country. Connecticut is a relatively small state. The firms in this state need the ability to work anywhere without penalty. This law would result in more administrative work for our firms in compliance and for the state in enforcement. It is unnecessary.
