Testimony of Scott M. Robbins

Chairman CT Association of Centers for Independent Living

On behalf of the Connecticut Association of Centers for Independent Living (CACIL),

I am writing to urge the Connecticut legislature to adopt the Finance Committee's revenue package to offset the devastating cuts proposed by the Governor in his budget. CACIL represents the statewide network of independent living centers. The centers for independent living provide essential support services to persons with disabilities living throughout our state. The centers, which are staffed by qualified persons with disabilities, provide information and referral to thousands of individuals each year, peer counseling, independent living skill training and advocacy.

The independent living centers provide a single point of entry into disability services, and are a key transition site under the Money Follows the Person (MFP) state initiative; moving people out of nursing homes back into the community. Not only is transitioning elders and people with disabilities back to the community from nursing facilities the right thing to do, it also saves the state millions of dollars through the enhanced Medicaid match and in institutional care. Centers receive limited federal funding, however the funding is to provide specific disability services. Without the state funding (through the Dept. of Rehabilitation Services) the centers would lose their infrastructure that subsidizes MFP, Aging & Disability Resource Centers, Ticket to Work and other cost saving programs.

In 2014 alone, CT's Independent Living Centers provided services to over 600 people with disabilities that prevented institutionalization, saving the state an estimated 14 million dollars annually. The relatively small investment from the state $528,680.00 reaps huge cost saving rewards.

The unintended result of eliminating the centers from the budget will be increased Medicaid and Unemployment Compensation costs, even greater reliance on costly state funded services and fewer people maximizing their independence. Many people with disabilities will lose their jobs, hundreds of people with physical and psychiatric disabilities will be unable to receive vital support services.

The consequences of eliminating state funding for Independent Living Centers and other vital support services and programs will increase state expenses far beyond the cost savings, and ultimately, it hurts Connecticut's children, adults and elders with disabilities.
